30th Sunday in Ordinary Time

1st Reading: Sirach 35:12-18 – Though not “unduly partial,” God does show special care for the poor, the oppressed, and the helpless--those with no one to provide for their needs. This is clear not only from God’s actions in the history of Israel, but also in the commands of his law (see, for example, Exodus 22:21). The Lord hears and answers their cries for help. 2nd Reading: 2 Timothy 4:6-18 – What Paul says about himself to Timothy conveys the image of one who serves God willingly. Paul uses both the cultic language of sacrifices and images from athletic competition (the race, the crown) in speaking of his own discipleship. As in both the 1st Reading and the Responsorial Psalm, Paul likewise attests to his experience of the Lord’s deliverance from all that threatened him. Gospel: Luke 18:9-14 – The introduction to today’s parable warns about being overly convinced of our own righteousness. The Pharisees took great pride in their observance of the Law and so considered themselves to be in right relationship with God because of it. Note, however, that the Pharisee prayed not to God, but to himself (Luke 18:11). The tax collector is the one who prayed to God willingly in humility and repentance. By doing so, this outcast and reputed sinner is the one who receives mercy and justification from God.
