Fourth Sunday in Ordinary Time

When Jesus proclaims whom he considers “blessed,” the strong and the proud are not listed. The rich and powerful are absent. Jesus says the blessed ones are the humble and lowly, the faithful who pursue justice and who take refuge in the Lord (see Zep 3:12). They boast only in the Lord Jesus and his salvation (see 1 Cor 1:31). To them, God promises the kingdom of God, an upside-down kingdom in which the last are first.

The blessed ones imitate God with their merciful acts—feeding the hungry, protecting the resident alien, and raising up those who are bowed down (see Ps 146:7-9). To them, God promises his mercy on the day of judgment.

The blessed ones mourn, because they are the oppressed and the captives, the fatherless and widows, the ones in exile longing for home. These blessed are those whom Paul describes as “lowly and despised of the world,” as “those who count for nothing” (1 Cor 1:28). To them, God promises his comfort and consolation, which in the Bible means redemption, it means the eternal day of sabbath rest and joy at the end of earthly strivings, it means the wiping away of all tears (see Rev 21:4).

The blessed ones long for God’s justice. They have pure hearts that single-mindedly seek the things of God and speak only the truth (see Zep 3:13). They love God’s law (see Zep 2:3); they secure justice for the oppressed (see Ps 146:7). To them, God promises what their heart most desires: they will be satisfied with God himself; they will be “filled with all the fullness of God” (Eph 3:19).

The blessed ones sow shalom, peace, wherever they go. Because they are meek, they do not return evil for evil or trample the weak. Like Jesus, they are gentle. They reconcile enemies to God and to one another. They are called the children of God because they are like their Father.
